Of Course You Are Coming to The Great LOT SALE At Stanford, Ky., Saturday, May 22, 1909.

Beginning at 1:30 P. M., May 22, 1909. 17 Nice Building Lots will be sold at auction; also the residence of the late Col. Thomas P. Hill.

One Lot Will Be Given Away Absolutely Free!

Everybody will be there. Come, you might be the lucky person to draw the FREE LOT. Now is the time to select a nice lot and build a home. This is the finest opportunity you will ever have to buy a splendid and desirable lot. All of these lots are on desirable streets, Main, Whitley, Miller and Logan Avenues. Concrete pavements have been laid on all these streets. Move to town and make the investment of your life; that is, educate your children. Stanford is no boom town; consequently your property value will never decrease, but on the other hand will gradually increase from year to year. There is not a vacant house in Stanford. Remember registration will open Saturday, May 22, at 9 o'clock A. M. and close at 1:30 P. M. at the home of the late Col. Thomas P. Hill. The sale of the lots will begin promptly at 1:30 P. M., and immediately after the sale the drawing for the free lot will take place. It will be necessary for the holder of the lucky number to be present in person when the drawing takes place. Don't forget the 150-acre farm we will sell. For full particulars, terms of sale, etc., write to

Relic of a Tragedy.

What is undoubtedly a knife which figured in a tragedy that stirred Kentucky from center to circumference, some 20 years ago, is in the possession of Mr. B. H. Perkins, of this city. The knife was used by Col. William Cassius Goodloe in the fatal encounter in the post office at Lexington in November, 1889, in which Col. Armistead Miller Swope was stabbed to death, and Col. Goodloe died a few hours later from the effects of a wound from a pistol shot fired by Col. Swope. The knife was picked up from the floor of the post-office by one of the clerks in the office, and covered with blood, was wrapped in a newspaper.

J. H. Swope, a brother of Colonel Swope, went to Lexington immediately on receipt of the news of the tragedy, to look after the remains, and for some reason the knife was turned over to him. Mr. Perkins was conducting a hotel in Danville at the time, and Mr. Swope brought the body to his house, on the way to Lincoln county for interment, and stopped with Mr. Perkins.

The knife was handed over to Mr. Perkins' clerk to be kept over night, and was placed in the office safe. In the excitement incident to the occasion, the knife was forgotten, and remained in the safe wrapped in the bloody paper, about a year. Mr. Perkins sold his hotel to A. Tribble, and in cleaning out his safe, incident to turning over the business, he found it there, and still has it in his possession. The knife has a buckhorn handle and a spring on the back to prevent it from closing when in use. When opened it is a fraction over 8 inches in length, the blade, which has a razor edge, being a fraction over 3½ inches in length. It has I X L on the blade, and was made by George Wostenholm, Sheffield, England.

Colonel Goodloe was a member of one of the most prominent families in Central Kentucky, and stood high in the councils of the Republican party in Kentucky. Col. Swope was born and reared in Lincoln county where he was widely connected. He was a splendid specimen of intellectual and physical manhood. He held the office of Internal Revenue Collector, in the Lexington district for a number of years. The trouble grew out of political jealousies, and culminated in the terrible tragedy. —Middlesboro News-Record.

"Wherever I was invited in America, always there was a crowd. Everybody seemed to be present."

"Everybody and his wife?"
"No, another peculiar thing—everybody and her husband."—Puck.

In a special message to Congress President Taft recommends legislation at the extra session of Congress to amend the Foraker act under which the territory is governed. The President says: "A situation of unusual gravity" exists through the failure of the assembly to pass the appropriation bills and charges that the Porto Ricans have forgotten the generosity of the United States and have too much political power. He concludes that the right to make appropriations should be taken away.

The Courier-Journal covers a multitude of faults when it announces editorially that it will not only refuse to support Senator McNutt but will oppose any ticket on which his name may appear. McNutt is one of the skunks, who after being elected by democrats, voted for Hon. W. O. Bradley for Senator.

The citizens of Louisville needn't go to see Barnum & Bailey this year—they can just watch the Republican primary convention and save their money. —Frankfort Journal.
